THE SERVICE IN THE ABBEY

A BEAUTIFUL FAREWELL

(London Evening News, Aug. 17) Before Lord Northcliffe was buried today in the quiet resting-place of his choosing there was a great solemn service held in Westminster Abbey.

To it there came many hundreds who in one way or another publicly or privately, had known Lord Northcliffe during his flashing career.

The service began at noon, but for a space before that hour the Abbey was full and a silence more impressive than could be any spoken words or echoing music filled the ancient grey building where so many of the joys and sorrows of the nation have been sanctified.

Under the lofty lantern with its upper gloom just pierced by the dim purple and scarlet of old glass stood the empty catafalque on which would shortly rest the mortal remains of one loved and admired round all the world.

Written in stone around it were the deeds of writers and statesmen, of fearless men and wise rulers.

TOLLING OF THE BELL

After the stroke of noon there came the tolling of a single bell, and the mourners in the transepts and choir knew that the body was being borne towards them.

Then down the long nave from the western door came the sweet voices of the choir, filling the hushed stillness with meaning, as has so often been heard through the centuries of Abbey history.

Whether it be lord or commoner, rich man or poor, the words are the same when it comes to the last service, and it was the old stately sentences beginning "I am the resurrection and the life" that came echoing under the fretted vault.

Then there appeared the choir in white robes and many mourners in black, and all moved slowly and mournfully towards the empty catafalque.

Last came the coffin, covered with a pall rich with heraldic embroidery. As it was laid in its place between the mourners with bowed heads, the tall candles were lit around it.

The clergy with their robes of learning and sanctity passed through the altar rails and the solemn worship in the presence of death had begun.

The organ took up the music from the boyish voices and once again it was the ninetieth Psalm that gave words to sorrow and hope and humility.

EXQUISITE CANTATION

Then followed the passage from Corinthians about the mystery of the Resurrection, and afterwards a sweet hymn which had been chosen with special purpose for this occasion, "Hark, hark, my soul!"

After the reading of the prayers there came what must have been to many the most beautiful and poignant moment of the whole service—the exquisite words and music of "The Cantation of the Faithful Departed."

Anything more touching, more eloquently expressive of the sorrow of Saved!

Here some of the crew of 500 of H.M.S. Raleigh are making their way ashore after the vessel had gone aground off Labrador.

death cannot be imagined, and as the sad music echoed back from roof to pillar it seemed the very voice of sorrow.

It was followed by the hymn which has brought faith and calm to so many millions of the bereaved in all the world: "O God, our help in ages past."

In the singing of this, as in the first hymn, nearly every one in the great building joined, in sincere and spontaneous worship.

From the altar came the blessing of the Canon. In his magnificent robes and with his stately presence he spoke the words which showed that the sacred ceremony had come to an end, and the Church had given its blessing to the dead and to the mourners.

All stood with bowed heads as the Dead March in "Saul" was given on the organ. Time cannot wither the thrilling power of that noble piece of music, and as the great notes of the brass throbbed so that one almost felt them rather than heard them, there was not one of the hundreds of mourners who did not see in their imagination the infinite silence and space that lie around the greatest human achievement.

Then the procession formed up—the boys in white and scarlet, the clergy with all the symbols of their mysteries, and the many bereaved relatives.

The coffin was turned on the catafalque, the candles were extinguished around it, and forth into the bright light of noontide was carried the body of one whom many will place in their memories among the mighty and illustrious dead.

All the time Chopin's "Funeral March," with its romantic vision of everything that death means to mankind, wafted from the organ-loft and over the departing mourners.

THE WREATHS

A Floral Empty Chair; World-Wide Emblems of Remembrance. Abundantly was "the Chief" remembered in flowers.

Eight motor-cars filled with wreaths drove direct to the cemetery.

Another followed the funeral car, which was also filled with wreaths.

Two wreaths only were placed on the coffin. At the head was the beautiful cross of white lilies, with the simple inscription: "From his wife."

At the foot was a wreath of pink and red roses, with the message: "With everlasting love—Mother." Flowers of every country filled the motor-car that followed.

A unique emblem was "The Empty Chair," made of copper chrysanthemums, which came from The Daily Mail.

The one word "Admiration" was inscribed on the wreath of white carnations from Sir Abe Bailey.

"The chivalrous fighter for her rights and national ideals, from grateful Rumania," was inscribed on a wreath of blue delphiniums and red and yellow roses.

There were many tender touches—such as a violet wreath "from the son of a very old friend." There was also a white book of flowers outlined with violets, and with the words written in violets: "Lives of great men all remind us."

THE BURIAL

Viscount Northcliffe's grave lies on the left of the main path of St. Mary-lebone Cemetery, a few yards beyond the Gleaners Memorial Chapel.

Beside it is the grave in which are interred his father (Alfred Harmsworth, barrister, who died in 1889)

The "J. K. Mitchell" Is on Her Beam Ends In Yarmouth Sound

YARMOUTH, Sept. 5.—The Boston three masted schooner "J. K. Mitchell" from that port for Liverpool is on her beam ends in Yarmouth Sound after striking Sunday morning on Gannet Southwest Ledge near here. She was refloated and went on beam ends afterwards. She will likely be towed to inner harbour to-morrow.

"Maid of Canada" Sinks off Halifax After Collision

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 4.—The three masted schooner "Maid of Canada" of La Have, N.S., from an American port for Halifax with five hundred tons bituminous coal, sank off Halifax Monday morning after being in collision with the small steamer "Sadie Mac" Captain Wilkie and crew of six men were taken here by the steamer "Sadie Mac". The "Maid of Canada" registered 330 tons, and was built at Weymouth in 1918.

De Valera Directs The Irregulars From House

DUBLIN, Sept. 4.—Eamonn De Valera and Erskine Childers are believed to have participated in the battle near Kilmorth, County Cork, on Saturday. During the conflict, in which the National troops defeated a greatly superior number of Irregulars, a guard of seventeen of the latter kept close watch over a farm house from which the two rebel leaders are believed to have directed operations.

Rejoicing Over Hope That Entombed Miners Alive

JACKSON, Cal., Sept. 4.—The night crew of rescuers working in Kennedy mine in an attempt to reach the forty-seven entombed men in the Argonaut gold mine, declared on coming to the surface today that when two signal blasts were fired on the 3,500 foot level, they were positive they were answered by five explosions coming from Argonaut. All Jackson is rejoicing over the report. The mine officials refused to comment on the statements of the miners.

GENOA, Sept. 5.—On Monday the Third Assembly of the League of Nations which was formally opened at eleven o'clock this morning outdid its predecessors, both in number of delegates and spectators present, while the animation on the floor at the opening was greater than it even has been. These things are interpreted by leards of League as most favourable to success of sessions, indicating that interest in the League is growing.

and an infant brother and sister; also his grandparents (Charles Harmsworth 1857, and Hannah Harmsworth 1874).

The cortege reached the main gate of the cemetery a few minutes before 2 p.m. A large crowd had awaited its coming for nearly an hour.

From the gate the Bishop of Birmingham, the Rev. P. H. Leary, and the Rev. Basil Bouchier, walking slowly side by side, conducted the procession to the graveside. The route was lined at a respectful distance by hundreds of silent sympathisers, and there were still more who stood about the grave in a great ring.

Beyond the grave lay the many wreaths that had been sent straight to the cemetery. They stretched for some twenty yards along the broad greensward beside the main path and some of them in the sunshine dazzled the eyes with their whiteness.

The grave itself was lined with white flowers—dahlia and big white marguerites—and evergreens.

The Bishop of Birmingham, with his assistants, took up their position at the head of the grave, and the relatives then encircled the grave. Old friends, associated for many years with "the Chief," drew near to hear the solemn recital of the Committal Service.

When the coffin was finally lowered into the grave the great white cross of lilies bearing the words "From His Wife" rested upon it—also his mother's roses and the wreaths from his brothers.

Many were the people whose eyes filled with tears to see this wonderful friend leaving them—unable to give them solace, encouragement, or guidance.

Steamer's Officers Severely Censored S. S. Egypt Tragedy Due To Negligence

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The Board of Trade, which investigated the sinking of the steamship Egypt off the Island of Ushant on May 20, announced that the disaster was due to collision with the French cargo steamer Seine and that the loss of life was mainly attributable to the failure of the master and chief officer to take proper measures for the saving of life and to exercise good order and discipline at the time of the collision. Nearly one hundred persons lost their lives. The Board of Trade further found that the owners failed to take effective measures to insure compliance with the Board regulations and exact good discipline and efficiency on the part of the crew. The Board suspended the certificate of the ship's master for six months and severely censured the chief officer.

CHAPTER XXXIII

Conclusion.

"How do you do, Lord Auchester?" she said, giving him her hand. Yorke took it, and for a moment he found that it trembled; but he said afterwards that he thought it was only fancy.

Then, without another word, she turned and moved away. They met—they were bound to meet—often in the after years, but it was never more than "How do you do, Lord Auchester?" "I hope you are well, Lady Eleanor?" until Leslie's first girl was born.

There had been a good deal of fuss—as the duke said, who made more fuss than any one else—over the birth of the son and heir; but the child, the first girl, was hailed as if she were the most wonderful production the world has ever seen, and Lucy was regarded with boundless envy because she was chosen as god-mother.

But the day before the christening Leslie received a magnificent set of pearls, inclosed in a box of white ivory, inside which was a slip of paper, bearing, in Lady Eleanor's handwriting, this inscription:

"To my godchild, Leslie Eleanor Auchester."

Yorke was amazed and bewildered, but Leslie understood in an instant. "What does it mean?" he demanded, staring at her, and almost letting the casket drop.

"It means that she is going to transfer her love to our—no, your little one, Yorke," she said. "Oh, don't you see? And we thought she hated us!"

She caught up her baby and kissed it, and laughed and cried over it, in her joy and thankfulness, for every time she had met Lady Eleanor her tender heart had ached. But now this little mite had removed the only thorn in Leslie's bed of roses.

"Yes, she shall have her," she said. "Eh?" exclaimed Yorke, staring.

"What! Altogether? I say!" "Oh, not altogether!" said Leslie, with a little gasp and clutching her baby tighter. "No, not altogether, but—but nearly! Oh, Yorke, Yorke, my cup of happiness is full now. Quite, quite full!"

THE END.

COMMUNITY SINGING

(London Daily Chronicle) Thousands, we understand, are meeting once a week to beguile the time with "community singing." But it has an object, a social object—to act as an antidote to Bolshevism. It is to achieve by expression what prohibition aims at doing by repression, to promote cheerful work and a good spirit.

The merry heart goes all the day. Your sad tires in a mile-a. Perhaps that is letting the cat out of the bag. Better not to tell people you are taking away their beer in order to make them work—better not to tell them that you are asking them to sing in order that they may earn higher wages. However, if cheerfulness were the only result, the experiment would be worth trying.

THE FOUR-POOLS MYSTERY

CHAPTER III.

I Make The Acquaintance of The Haunt.

Repeated questionings only brought out the same statement but with more circumstantial details. The other negroes backed her up, and the story grew rapidly in magnitude and horror. Nancy's seizure, it appeared, were almost as excited as she. The only approximately calm one among them was Cat-Eye Mose, who sat in the door-way watching the scene with half furtive eyes and something resembling a grin on his face.

The Colonel, observing that it was a good deal of commotion for the sake of one small chicken, disgustedly dropped the inquiry. As we stepped out into the gallery again, I glanced back at the dancing firelight, the weird cross shadows, and the circle of dusky faces, with, I confess, a somewhat creepy feeling. I could see that in such an atmosphere, it would not take long for superstition to lay its hold on a man.

"What's the meaning of it?" I asked as we strolled slowly toward the house.

"The meaning of it," Radnor shrugged, "is that some of them are lying. The haunt, I could swear, has a good flesh and blood appetite. Nancy has been frightened and she believes her own story. There's never any use in trying to sift a negro's lies; they have so much imagination that after five minutes they believe themselves."

"I think I could spot the ghost," I returned. "And that's your precious Cat-Eye Mose."

Radnor shook his head. "Mose doesn't need to steal chickens. He gets all he wants."

"Mose," the Colonel added emphatically, "is the one person on the place who is absolutely to be trusted."

We had almost reached the house, when we were suddenly startled by a series of shrieks and screams coming toward us across the open stretch of lawn that lay between us and the old negro cabins. In another moment an old woman, her face twitching with terror, had thrown herself at our feet in a species of convulsion.

"De haunt! De haunt! He's a-beckoning," was all we could make out between her moans.

The other negroes came pouring out from the kitchen and gathered in a frenzied circle about the writhing woman. Mose, I noted, was among them; he could at least, prove an alibi this time.

"Here, Mose, quick! Get us some torches," Radnor called. "We'll fetch that haunt up here to answer for himself. It's old Aunt Sukie," he added to me, nodding toward the woman on the ground whose spasms by this time were growing somewhat quieter.

"She lives on the next plantation and was probably taking a cross cut thru the laurel path that leads by the cabins. She's almost a hundred and is pretty nearly a witch herself."

Mose shambled up with some torches—pine knots dipped in tar such as they use for hunting 'possums at night and he and I and Radnor set out for the cabins. I noticed that none of the other negroes volunteered to assist; I also noticed that Mose went on ahead with a low whining cry which sent chills chasing up and down my back.

"What's the matter with him?" I gasped more intent on the negro than the ghost we had come to search.

"That's the way he always hunts," Radnor laughed. "There are a good many things about Mose that you will have to get used to."

We searched the whole region of the abandoned store houses for food; the rest were empty. We poked into all of them but found nothing more terrifying than a few bats and owls. Though I did not give much consideration to the fact at the time, I later remembered that there was one of the cabins which we didn't explore as thoroughly as the rest. Mose dropped his torch as we entered, and in the confusion of relighting it, the interior was somewhat alighted. In any case, we unearthed no haunt that night; and we finally gave up the search and turned back to the house.

"I suspect," Radnor laughed, "that if the truth were known, old Aunt Sukie's beckoning haunt would turn out to be nothing more alarming than a white cow waving her tail."

"It's rather suggestive coming on top of the chicken episode," I observed.

"Oh, this won't be the end! We'll have haunt served for breakfast, dinner and supper during the rest of your stay. When the niggers begin to see things they keep it up."

When I went upstairs that night, Red followed close on my heels to see that I had everything I needed. The room was a huge four-windowed affair, furnished with a canopied bed and a mahogany wardrobe as big as a small house. The nights still being chilly, a roaring wood fire had been built, adding a note of cheerfulness to an otherwise sombre apartment.

"This was Nan's room," he said suddenly.

"Nan's room!" I echoed, glancing about the shadowy interior. "Rather heavy for a girl."

"It's a trifle severe," he agreed, "but I dare say it was different when she was here. Her things are all packed away in the attic." He picked up a candle and held it so that it lighted the face of a portrait over the mantel. "That's Nan—painted when she was eighteen."

"Yes," I nodded. "I recognized her the moment I saw it. She was like that when I knew her."

"It used to hang downstairs, but after her marriage my father had it brought up here. He kept the door locked until the news came that she was dead, then he turned it into a guest-room. He never comes in himself; he won't look at the picture."

Radnor spoke shortly, but with an underlying note of bitterness. I could see that he felt keenly on the subject. After a few desultory words, he somewhat brusquely said good-night, and left me to the memories of the place.

Instead of going to bed I sat about unpacking. I was tired but wide awake. Aunt Sukie's convulsions and our torchlight hunt for ghosts were novel events in my experience, and they acted as anything but a sedative. The unpacking finished, I settled myself in an easy chair before the fire and fell to studying the portrait. It was a huge canvas in the romantic fashion of Romney, with a landscape in the background. The girl was dressed in flowing pink drapery, a garden hat filled with roses swinging from her arm, a Scotch collar with great lustrous eyes pressed against her side. The pose, the attributes, were artificial; but the painter had caught the spirit Nannie's face looked out of the frame as I remembered it from long ago. Youth and gaiety and goodness trembled on her lips and laughed in her eyes. The picture seemed a prophecy of all the happiness the future was to bring. Nannie at eighteen with life before her!

And three years later she was dying in a dreary little Western town, separated from her girlhood friends, without a word of forgiveness from her father. What had she done to deserve this fate? Merely set up her will against his, and married the man she loved. Her husband was poor, but from all I ever heard, a very decent chap. As I studied the eager smiling face, I felt a hot wave of anger against her father. What a power of vindictiveness the man must have, still to cherish rancour against a daughter fifteen years in her grave! There was something too poignantly sad about the unfulfilled hope of the picture. I blew out the candles to rid my mind of poor little Nannie's smile.

Visiting Celebrities Prove Southern States World's Champion Publicity Getters

Mary Margaret McBride, Noted Interviewer, Says All Famous Visitors Ask for Dixie

New York City—It makes no difference whether it's an immigrant unable to speak a word of English or a dignitary with half a dozen languages at his tongue's tip, after the visitor to this country has seen the Statue of Liberty and the Woolworth Tower, he always wants to know the whereabouts of "way down south in Dixie."

This is the discovery of Mary Margaret McBride, feature writer for the New York Evening Mail and other eastern publications whose daily business is the interviewing of celebrities.

"Invariably foreigners seem to have heard more about the south than any other section of the United States except New York," she declares.

South Arouses Curiosity
"I remember having tea at the Ritz with Mrs. W. L. George, just after the famous English writer brought his pretty bride here last winter. Mrs. George was trying, as she frankly admitted, to find out everything about America and she asked bushels of questions."

"Oh, I know I'll adore your south," she said finally. "It's so romantic."

"Others who have asked eagerly about Dixie were Mrs. Muriel MacSwiney, widow of the late Lord

Mayor of Ireland, Madame Marie Curie, of France, discoverer of radium, and the other day, Frau Georg Michaelis, wife of the former chancellor to the German Kaiser.

"Even Margot Asquith, for all her show of superiority, looked almost interested in Kentucky and Virginia were mentioned."

Lady Actor Solves Problem
"Since I'm from Paris, myself, I always take the liberties to the south as a sort of personal compliment but I was never able to figure out how people's friendliness about that section until I met Lady Astor, a Virginian transplanted to England came over not long ago."

"She said Dixie owed its fame to the song writers and ballad singers who press agent it continually. And when you think it over you see she's undoubtedly right."

Georgia Played 'Round the World
"Nearly every photograph in the world plays the modern fox trot 'Georgia,' with its famous lyrics:

"You put the sweet
In Home Sweet Home,
My own sweet Georgia."

and every college quartette anywhere undoubtedly sings 'My Old Kentucky Home' and 'Dixie.' As for 'Swanee River,' missionaries find that savages use its tune for a war dance."

"They may call the south 'flow' but they can't say she doesn't lead the country in getting free and effective publicity for herself!"

The Manuela's Tragedy ENQUIRY BEFORE JUDGE MORRIS

ISAAC LEDREW, SWORN—

N day, and the matter of ballast would not be much as it was only a matter of putting some stones in the bottom of the boat which would only take a few minutes. So far as I know no boats went off from any part of the shore that day to the scene of the accident; I do not know why they did not go but I do say there was no wind or loup enough to hinder them from going except a very small boat. I have been out in a caplin boat in Conception Bay with more wind and loup than there was that day. Any of the caplin boats that were hauled up on the beach along the shore, and were fitted with sails or oars, would be fit enough to go out that day. I spent from three weeks to a month every summer for the last thirty years, going around Conception Bay in a boat and I understand the compass. The place where the boat is supposed to have turned over would be about a mile to the south of Kelly's Island and the way the wind was that day they would have to beat up to Kelligrews from Manuela; the wind was too far off the land to lie up. They could beat up by making a long track up and a short one in. About 2 a.m. on Sunday morning Mr. Dawe, Reid's agent, called me and said that the Pawnee had left Carbonear and was on her way to Kelligrews. He said Mr. McKay was at Kelligrews and wanted to be put aboard the Pawnee. We got LeDrew's motor boat, and when the Pawnee arrived, just before daylight we put Mr. McKay aboard on her. I remained on board the Pawnee with Mr. McKay and William LeDrew also remained on board. We went to Kelly's Island and steamed to the west end where there were some men fishing and were living in their shacks. The captain blew the whistle and hailed them from the ship and asked them if they saw any small boat around and they said no. We steamed around the Island and down as far as Martin Cove and then round the front of Little Bell Island and from there towards Horse Cove all out that shore as far as Portugal Cove. The captain decided to go into Portugal Cove and we all went ashore and one of the men went to the telephone to learn if there was any news. He was not long gone and before he came back I was looking around the Cove from the wharf and I noticed a white object on the corner of the cove. I walked over to the stages and I found it was the boat we were looking for and it was bottom up and very low in the water and the little lop that was there was flowing over her bottom; the boat was grounding on the beach. We procured a fishing boat and towed her around to the wharf. The sail was on the port side and on examining it we found it was reefed and the sail could be single reefed only as there was no double reefing points. The next cloth to the leech cloth was torn the whole length of the sail; the leech cloth was new and appeared to be of the kind of material used in roller towels; the other part was a kind of canvas but was very rotten. The reason why I know it was rotten is because I tried it. There was a gaff and boom on the sail and there was a sheet on the boom bit, it was not fastened to the boat. There was no knots in the sheet. The spar was not broken. When the spar was put in place in the boat the gaff was hung on a traverse and the sail could be lowered down without taking down the spar. There were no backstays to the mast and I am not able to say whether the sail was hoisted up on the mast or lowered down when we found the boat. What kept the sail to the boat was the sheet was rolled up with another piece of rope that was attached to the centre board and was evidently rolled there by accident as the men would not fasten it there. The mast hole in the thwart in the bow of the boat was not broken. After the boat upset the lop would take the spar out of the place where it was strapped; the least bit of lop would take it out as there were no back stays to keep it in place. I could see no rowlocks or place to row the boat and there was no sign of any paddles. When they left they had only two canoes' paddles. They would not be able to row against the wind, on the day of the accident, with the paddles. The rudder was in place but the bottom pintel was broken, and had been repaired by a screw and a piece of wire. I could not tell whether it was an old job or not or whether it was done that day. I saw no marks on the boat out of the ordinary. In my opinion that boat was too small to be out that day for the wind was blowing, and the boat, in my opinion was fit only for a pond or smooth water. In my opinion if the men really understood the danger they would not go out that day as taking into account the weather conditions, there were too much wind and loup for a boat of that size. I understand there was a belt found in the box of the centre board, but I did not see it. In my opinion, even after the sail was reefed, there was still too much canvas carried on the little boat that day. There would be no difficulty for the men in the little boat, if it was fitted with oars or paddles, to row along shore to Manuela that day as the water along shore was smooth, and it was well sheltered all along by the land. In my opinion that would be the proper course for the men to have taken that day instead of putting off to sea and trying to beat in, in a boat that was not suited for the purpose. After finding the boat the Pawnee went to Bell Island and after wards landed me at Kelligrews at 2 p.m.

Wedding Bells

O'REILLY-BYRNE.

A very fashionable wedding took place at 3 p.m. yesterday at the Oratory of the Sacred Heart, Mercy Convent, when Miss Mary Margaret O'Reilly, only daughter of Mrs. J. W. Allen, the ushers were Messrs. Graham Balfour and Ronald Bearse. The bride, who was beautifully attired in orchid crepe, with tulle bow for her hair. She carried a basket of pink and white carnations. The two little train bearers were Miss Mary Kieley, niece of the groom, and Miss Margaret O'Mara, wearing lemon crepe de chine dresses with tulle bows for their hair. The duties of best man were capably performed by Mr. J. W. Allen. The ushers were Messrs. Graham Balfour and Ronald Bearse. After the ceremony the wedding party motored to Smithville where a reception was held, which was attended by the many friends of the newly wedded pair. The various toasts were duly honored, the health of the bride being proposed by the Hon. M. P. Gibbs, and best wishes were extended for many happy years. At 6 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. O'Reilly left by motor for Bay Bulls, where the honeymoon will be spent. The bride's travelling costume was a smart grey canton dress with hat to match. Many beautiful presents were received as well as many congratulatory telegrams from abroad. At night a dance was held and a very enjoyable time was held. The ball room at Smithville had been especially decorated for the occasion and presented a very attractive appearance, the various colour schemes being beautifully blended. In the general felicitations to Mr. and Mrs. O'Reilly the Advocate heartily joins.

Dye Skirt, Coat Draperies With Diamond Dyes

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can dye or tint faded, shabby skirts, dresses, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, hangings, draperies, every thing like new. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed, even if you have never dyed before. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool, or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade or run.

Last Night's Game

Last night's clash between the Saints and the C.E.I. was a hard fought contest, and up to the last minute, when the Saints watched up the winning goal, the result hung in the balance.

In the first period, both teams scored shortly after the start. Hawyers doing the useful for the Saints and Pennell for the Institute lads. In the second period the Saints, after some fifteen minutes of play, had increased their lead to 3. Hawyers and Young being responsible for the scoring, and it looked as if they would have a comfortable win. The Institute lads, however, had to be reckoned with, and through Wisnor and Pennell the score again became equal. The latter part of the game was played by moonlight, which made good football difficult, nevertheless both teams gave a creditable exhibition and within a minute of full time Young scored the winning goal.

The next game will be played on Thursday evening between the Highlanders and Felidians, and the play-off, Cadets vs. B.S., on Friday.

Last evening's line-up was: SAINTS—Goal, Joyce; backs, A. Barnes, Dr. Tait; halves, W. Elton, E. Foster, G. Elton; forwards, McElduff, Young, Johnston, Sawyers, Brown. C.E.I.—Goal, Smith; backs, A. Feaver, H. Knight; halves, Healey, M. Hunt, Hillyard; forwards, Pennell, S. Winsor, G. Adams, E. Churchill, Smith.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, TUESDAY, SEPT. 5th., 1922.

A Brighter Era For Newfoundland Unproductive Relief Works Must End

Despite the protestations of the enemies of the Government and cronic retarders of the country's progress to the contrary, public demand for the development of the Humber Valley pulpwood resources and immense water powers is not diminishing, but is becoming more insistent day by day.

That the starting of this big industrial scheme is now practically an accomplished fact is to be credited to the present Government as one of the greatest, if indeed not the greatest achievements or any administration since Responsible Government.

There can be little wonder why the Opposition, the Opposition's followers or the Opposition press so strenuously oppose the project that has for its aim the turning of the great tracts of timber and the unexcelled water-powers of the Humber Valley into actual cash. It is not difficult to see why at this stage, they should endeavour with might and main to prevent the Government from supplying productive work for the people instead of continuing to supply them with unproductive relief works.

Newfoundland has two great resources, on the result of the utilization of which she must stand or fall. One of these is the fisheries; the other embraces her timber resources and water-powers. In other words we can look for wealth to both the sea and the land; but, while the former may be precarious in its bounty, the latter is stayable and as certain as would be a gold mine of proven wealth. If Newfoundland is to have something to depend upon she must have her timber and water-power resources developed. Anything is likely to happen in the case of our fisheries and, indeed never was there a time when so many things happened to them all at once as now. The catch has not been up to average and our markets were never worse because of the combined influences of low exchange and improper marketing. The people have suffered from this and they have further suffered from unsettled employment conditions abroad where we were wont to find much assistance in the way of employment in the past.

No one argues that the starting of the Humber project is going to solve the whole problem, but what can be argued is that the starting of it will help us immeasurably in the present crisis, and that the starting of it is the beginning of a brighter era for Newfoundland and of an era of more certain prosperity for her people.

The important thing at this juncture, however, is that when the Humber development work does start, there will be thousands of all classes of our men get good, steady and remunerative employment there who without it are to-day out of work and would be for goodness knows how long. Moreover, new money will be put into circulation, hundreds of thousands of dollars, per month, and think what effect this will have on business thruout the Colony. Most important of all is the fact that this will be money accruing from production; new money coming into the country as the price of her now unused resources of manpower as well as water-power.

As has been previously said, it is not difficult to see why the Opposition kicks so hard against the Humber Proposition. First of all its success means that the men responsible for inaugurating it will have conferred an inestimable boon upon the country and the people. In the second place, they themselves have been connected with so many wild cat schemes in the past that they do not want the Government of the day to have to their credit a big, successful industrial project of this kind, and finally the suc-

Conditions Demand More of Labour Giving Industries

Sept. 4, 1922.

Editor Evening Advocate.

Dear Sir,—I notice through the Press that men working for Major Cotton at Hawk's Bay are out on a strike. This seems to be in keeping with the times. While I do not advocate strikes as the proper methods of settling labor disputes, yet I sympathize very keenly with the men in this and a great many other cases, and I do so for the following reasons:

In the first place, anyone who has taken time to reason the subject out to a definite conclusion with facts, figures and common sense as his guides concludes that no man can support a family in Newfoundland on the money he makes by cutting pitprops at the insignificant sum of $4.50 per cord. Any man except a thief and a robber—unless he is totally ignorant of wood cutting—will agree with me when I say that $6.00 per cord would be little enough to pay. No one has any right to expect our hard-working neglected Newfoundlanders to cut this wood and put it on the bank ready for shipping for $4.50 per cord. I have been informed by several men who were cutting both pulpwood and pitprops last winter that the average pay per day at this work was less than one dollar. Is it any wonder then that there are scores of men in this country who are in the awful condition of mental and physical despondency. One poor fellow told a friend of mine a few days ago that because this paltry sum could hardly keep his family of six children from being hungry, and that it was impossible for him to buy clothes for them—they being at that time clothed in rags—he was sorely tempted many times to commit suicide. Only the sense of paternal responsibility prevented this man and others from doing something desperate and disgraceful.

And yet we allow conditions like this to exist in a country rich in resources and possibilities. How damnably negligent and tolerable we are! A country with twenty odd millions of dollars in savings accounts, millions more in current drawing accounts, and millions invested—mostly in foreign stocks and bonds; yet lying at our feet like the beggar of old—begging for the crumbs of industrial development—are thousands of honest, law-abiding hungry men. These men have been robbed, stripped, and left to die in a country unequalled in this Western Hemisphere for her boundless treasures and riches, treasures and riches imprisoned and sealed up by the greed, stupidity, and covetousness of avaricious speculators and time-serving, office-seeking politicians.

Mr. Editor, what a picture we have before us; five hundred million tons of coal lying dormant within the bowels of Newfoundland; an inexhaustible supply of iron ore; immense deposits of the richest copper ore in the world; millions of feet of timber suitable for both pulpwood and building material; unlimited water power; thousands of acres of rich agricultural land; and fisheries capable of producing if properly developed, at least fifteen million dollars yearly.

Yet, in contrast with this we have thousands of families in dire need of the bare necessities of life, many of them living on bread and tea alone without butter, sugar, meat and vegetables. In spite of this, and in the face of a very poor fishery, there are some folks in our midst who through political prejudice and petty jealousies will not speak one word in favor of mitigating this suffering and bettering these conditions by the magic wand of employment by the opening up of the great Humber resources. Not only do they not speak or write a word in favor of such a proposal, but let it be said to their eternal shame that they both speak and write against those things which would mean happiness for our people and economic salvation for our country.

Because of this we need to pray:

"God give us men!
For times like this demand strong men;

Men with clean hands, pure hearts, strong wills, and living faith!

Men who will not heed the demagogue, but scorn his treacherous flattery!

Men whom the spoils of office will not buy;

Men whom the lust of office will not kill;

Men who will not lie!

Tall men, sun-crowned, with heads above the fog in private thinking and in public duty."

O God, in thy mercy yet, give us men like this."

"Lest we forget, lest we forget!"

F. B. BOONE.

LATEST

SMYRNA, Sept. 5—The dreadnoughts Iron Duke and King George V. have arrived here for the purpose of protecting British interests. The Turkish advance continues, entire line of Greeks withdrawn without fighting. Towns and villages in their path are being burned and thousands of Christian refugees are approaching Smyrna where churches and schools are already filled. Many are arriving in starving condition, women and children especially showing marked signs of suffering.

ATHENS, Sept. 5—A Greek communication reports the Greek army in Asia Minor repulsed and routed Turkish Nationalists east of Brussa. Previous reports have been to the effect that the Turks were nearing Brussa and the fall of the place was imminent.

RIGA, Sept. 5—It is reported from Moscow that Archbishop Benjamin, Metropolitan of Petrograd and others, condemned for interfering with the seizure of church treasures, were executed by a firing squad in Petrograd August 10. The Bolsheviks have begun the arrest of numerous students throughout Russia.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 5—A plot to kill the royal family while attending races has been uncovered and a number of former Hungarian officers are arrested.

LONDON, Sept. 5—The former German Kaiser's intended bride is Princess Hermine of Reuss, thirty-four years old, according to report quoted by the Daily Mail's Berlin correspondent. The engagement, he adds, will not be announced until after the anniversary of the late ex-Kaiser's birthday, October 22. The Times of London, August 25, published a report that the former Emperor William was betrothed to a widow of the German aristocracy of almost royal rank. Princess Hermine of Reuss is the widow of Prince Jean of Schonach-Carolath, who died in April, 1920. She is the mother of five children and owns a large estate in Saarbr. Silesia.

LONDON, Sept. 5—George Robert Sims, journalist and dramatic author, died at his home here today aged 75.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5—Bishop Samuel Fallows, head of the Reformed Episcopal Church in the United States, died at 4.30 this morning.

cess of the Humber scheme will mean the nullifying of much, if not all, their contemptible tactics to put the country on the rocks of bankruptcy and industrial disaster.

The Sydney Strike and Votes Polled

HALIFAX, Sept. 1.—The Nova Scotia coal strike, the termination of which is definitely marked by the result of yesterday's vote, began Aug. 15, following the repudiation by the men of an agreement negotiated at Sydney two days before, between representatives of the British Empire Steel Corporation and the members of the outgoing executive of the Mine Workers' organization in this district. That agreement provided for a total minimum of $3.25 a flat increase of 40 cents on the existing rates, and 10 per cent. increase on the contract rates, with a levelling-up of the rates differentials applicable to the Sydney Mines sub-district.

The agreement also provided for a contract to extend to the last of December, of this year and retroactively to July 1st of this year.

In brief, the new proposals, mediated at Sydney on the 25th, and accepted in the referendum, provide for differential rates of the now famous MacKinnon Award. While the total minimum remains at $3.25 (the total minimum of the MacKinnon Award) a scaling-up of the differential rates to bring them more into conformity with the MacKinnon rates, provides for large increases over the rates written into the agreement reached at Sydney on the 13th, two days before the strike. The new proposals provide for a 12½ per cent. increase on contract rates, with a half cent increase for machine runners who pay their own helpers.

A long-term contract to run to January 15th, 1924, and retroactive pay to July 15th, are the other major features of the new proposition. Inclusion of all classes of labor included in the Montreal Agreement is also provided for in the new agreement.

The strike just terminated will stand with the most remarkable labor disputes. Conducted with a most striking display of orderliness, the period of its progress left Nova Scotia mining districts (as Mayor Morrison of Glace Bay has remarked) "as quiet as the grave." Absolute absence of any serious disorders may be largely attributed to the fact that in the strike areas the lid was clamped down tight on the sale or use of intoxicants. As the strike went on day after day, the spectacle of a drunken man about the mining districts would have been regarded as a sensation. This enforced prohibition was to some extent spontaneous—and to a great extent, it may now be said the result of a cast-iron organization conducted by the strikers themselves. "Booze pickets," were everywhere. All motor cars and other vehicles coming into the strike areas were stopped and subjected to search for liquor. Places known to be dealing in intoxicants were picketed; and the whole liquor-suppression organization functioned in a manner that left the mining districts as "dry as the Sahara."

But while the strike was conducted with the utmost orderliness, there was about it an ominous air. "This is too quiet," has been a stock expression about the mines. It was an orderliness of a deliberate, organized character; and particularly during the course of the negotiations that led up to the settlement, that deliberate, organized quality was very apparent.

So long as the negotiations proceeded to a successful issue, to be followed by an acceptance of the mediated proposals, those closely in touch knew that everything would be well. Had the negotiations broken down, or had the proposition resulting therefrom been rejected, there is no man in the province capable of saying what might not have resulted.

With a heavy armed garrison at Number 2, the nerve-centre of the big South Cape Breton field, and with one thousand provincial police being recruited, one cannot very well see how disorders or force could have been avoided, particularly when the police would have begun to "take over" control of the situation from the strikers' organization.

There is no need for mincing words now; Nova Scotia has passed through a crisis simply bristling with dangerous possibilities. Just how close the spark was to the magazine only those closely in touch will ever know. It is a situation that must never be permitted to occur again in this province. And since one is on the point, it may be said that a policy of drift, apparent for many months, played its own part in allowing matters to come to such a pass.

THE VOTE.

Magistrate's Court

Only two vagrants appeared before Judge McCarthy in the Magistrate's Court this morning. One was a young girl whose mental faculties are impaired and who spends her time either on the streets or in the Penitentiary. She was given 30 days.

The other vagrant was a man, also of none too bright intellect, who has been sleeping in the woods all the summer. In other words, he is the first of quite a large class of his kind to return from the country to take up winter quarters in the Penitentiary. As the weather is considered yet too fine for hibernation, he was let go for the present.

Canadian Teachers' Intimate Sketch of Travels in Britain

THE PARTY OF EDUCATIONISTS MET WITH MOST FRIENDLY RECEPTION EVERYWHERE—MEMBERS ABSORBING SPIRIT OF BROTHERLAND AS HISTORIC PLACES VISITED.

LONDON, July 30.—(By a member of the Canadian Teachers' party in England.)—If London has not won our hearts in the same degree that Oxford did, it is not owing to any failure to feel its spell, but because the complexity of the huge metropolis, exhibiting, as it does, all sides of life, at first bewilders the newcomer. "London grows on you," those fortunate beings who know the full force of the remark tell us, adding that a couple of months is quite insufficient for the stranger to gain a true impression of it. Alas, we have had but twelve days; but we have certainly made the most of them.

No more determined sight-seers are to be found anywhere than the Canadian teachers. I am sure the police, especially those in the vicinity of Westminster Abbey and Trafalgar Square, "spot" us now directly they see us. Invariably we are scurrying along at the heels of our leader, sometimes a mere handful of us, more often the whole two hundred. Our dignity is quite forgotten, particularly when the word is passed along that we are to have tea. We have all developed appetites of the kind which charitable persons term "healthy," and the appeal English cakes has for us is hard to withstand. Whenever we detect on some unsuspecting townsfolk for tea, I am inevitably reminded of two poems of my childhood—"The Charge of the Light Brigade," and "The Assyrians Came Down Like Wolves on the Fold."

Amid all the turmoil, our honorary organizer, Major Fred Ney, is invariably urbane and smiling. Of course he is a strong-minded man, the fact of his voluntarily escorting two hundred women to Europe proves that.

A PATRIOTIC TRIBUTE.

The first real event of our London visit took place on Thursday morning, July 29, when we went to Westminster Abbey to lay a wreath on the grave of the Unknown Warrior. The Right Rev. the Dean of Westminster, K.C.V.O., in a brief address, described the ceremony which took place on Armistice Day, 1920, when the body was laid to rest, and pointed out the wreath given by H.M. the King, which, faded and withered as it is, still lies at the foot of the grave. The inscription accompanying our wreath read:

"And as they trusted, We the task inherit:
The unfinished task for which their lives were spent;
Put leaving us a portion of their spirit,
They gave their witness, and they died content."

"In loving memory of the men and women of the Empire who died serving mankind during the Great War. Placed upon the grave of the Unknown Warrior by the teachers from Canada, New Zealand, Newfoundland and South Africa, visiting the Motherland under the auspices of the Overseas Education League, London, July 29, 1922."

Archdeacon Cody was also present and addressed us.

MEETINGS OF BRITISH COLLEAGUES.

The first social function of our London program took place the same evening, when the National Union of Teachers and the London Teachers' Association held a reception for us in the Holborn restaurant. This proved to be an exceptionally interesting and enjoyable affair. We met personally some of the leading educationists in London, and other persons prominent in the life of the city, including Col. the Right Hon. L. S. Amery, M.P., Parliamentary and Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, who welcomed us on behalf of His Majesty's Government; Sir James Yoxall, general secretary of the National Union of Teachers; W. G. Cove, president of the same organization; Lady Sybil Grey, well known in Canada; Miss Gertrude Drayton, C.B.E., secretary of the Victoria League; Sir Francis Younghusband, president of the Royal Geographical Society; Lord and Lady Gorell, Lord Hartington, Sir Jas. Allen, K.C.B., High Commissioner for New Zealand, and several others. In addition to the program of speeches, there was some excellent music by the band of H.M. 1st Life Guards.

THE DANGER OF EYESTRAIN.

So much have we been seeing and doing that there is no hope of describing even half the events in which we have figured. All our sight-seeing has been of a very intensive character—the strained expression of our faces testifies to that. Some there are who succeed in always being at the elbow of the guide, who miss meals and sleep in order to acquire as much ancient lore as it is humanly possible to absorb, and whose zeal never tires. These are of the number who, in the remarkably short space of eight or nine days have "done" the British Museum, St. Paul's, the Abbey, the Tower, the Houses of Parliament, the picture galleries, and Lambeth Palace. They have visited Canterbury, the Royal Caledonian Schools at Bushey, have explored the nethermost crypt of the cathedral at St. Alban's, have paused in admiration before the magnificent castle of Lord Sackville, at Knole Park, and have got round to three or four receptions. They have even managed to squeeze in Madame Tussaud's and the Zoo—and are still going strong.

HEARD ONLY GIGGLES.

I must confess my chief recollection of our visit to St. Paul's is that of our ascent to the whispering gallery where a visibly perspiring guide succeeded, after much effort, in lining most of us along the wall in readiness to hear the "whisper." Some hundred and fifty or so ears were pressed against the cold stone, disturbing as many hats. Followed a comparative silence. Finally, heads were lifted and voices enquired, "Did you hear anything?" Some maintained they had heard a sort of "sis, swiss," others said it must have been their imaginations, since they had heard only a few giggles.

MOST STRIKING RECEPTION.

Of the many receptions we have enjoyed since we landed in England two weeks ago, the one which stands out as being especially distinctive, almost unique, was that given us by the Worshipful Company of Mercers at their hall in Ironmonger Lane, East London. The senior of the ancient Livery companies of London, the Mercers have had a long and honored career, extending back to early medieval times. Something of the history of the organization and its rare silver and gold wares was told to us by Col. F. D. Watney, clerk of the company, while Chas. Watney, the president, also addressed us. Among other things, he said that the Mercers had often entertained Canadian soldiers in the hall the same hall that witnessed the first meetings of the Bank of England. The Mercers are actively engaged in educational work. In addition to other trusts, they manage three schools, the pupils numbering nearly 1,500.

Another enjoyable reception was that tendered us by the Victoria League, when we were welcomed by the Dowager Countess of Jersey, president of the League, Miss Drayton, Lady Leighton, sister of Lord Balfour, Lady Allardice and others.

VISITED LAMBETH PALACE.

We were greatly honored in being invited by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Randall Davidson to tea in their London residence, Lambeth Palace. Miss Tait, daughter of the late Archbishop Tait, and sister-in-law of the present Archbishop, conducted us through the palace. We spent a considerable time in the library where we were shown some of the ancient manuscripts, now almost priceless.

On several occasions we made trips out of town, the most important being our visit to Canterbury, July 26. Among other things we saw the place where Thomas a Becket was murdered, and mounted the steps, worn by the knees of countless pilgrims, to the spot where his shrine used to be. We were interested, also, in the tomb of the Black Prince, above which still hang his helmet, gloves and coat of mail. Other visits to points outside of London included St. Alban's, where we saw the glorious cathedral, Hatfield House, residence of the Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury, Westminster, the birthplace of General Wolfe, and Greenwich.

AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

Through the efforts of Lady Sybil Grey and other officers of the Victoria League, we were given permission to enter the grounds of Buckingham Palace Saturday, July 22. This is a privilege very rarely accorded. We formed into two long lines, and when the King and Queen, with Princess Mary, drove along on their return from a review, we cheered them right royally. The King, especially, made a very kind acknowledgment of our greeting.

Although Parliament is still sitting, we were permitted to go through the House of Commons and other sections of Westminster. Sir Alfred Yeo, member for Poplar, London, acted as our guide, while Sir Howard d'Egville, secretary of the Empire Parliamentary Association, and several other members also escorted us. We were given a short address by the Marquis of Lincolnshire, Lord Great Chamberlain, who among other things, voiced his satisfaction at the cattle embargo being now practically lifted.

On Sunday afternoon we attended the 3 o'clock service at Westminster Abbey, when we were kindly welcomed by Rev. W. H. Carnegie, sub-dean, and canon-in-residence.

Paderewski Turns From Politics To the Piano

LONDON, Aug. 28.—A question of immediate practical interest, raised in England by the American demand for British coal, is that of the capacity of the British mining industry to meet the demands with the least injury to the requirements of other customers.

The pressure continues to increase, and it is estimated that the American requirement will soon approximate 100,000 tons a day. The tonnage already taken up, however, does not justify that estimate, for the fixtures reported since the boom began represents a deadweight capacity of between 600,000 and 700,000 tons only.

A circumstance to be reckoned with is the advent of Canadian business. There are many indications of shortage in the supply of bituminous and anthracite coal from the United States on which Canada, under normal conditions, depends exclusively, and in the event of a continuance of the coal and railway difficulties in the United States, a strong demand for large supplies of English coal from Canada will doubtless soon have to be reckoned with. Coincident with the inquiries from America, there is a growing demand from Germany and the Scandinavian countries for Northumberland, Durham, Yorkshire and Scottish coal.

These are markets in which South Wales competes only to an insignificant extent, but the more the northern coalfields export to the Continent of Europe, the less they will have for shipment to America and the more acute will become the demands from the United States for Welsh coal. This gives rise to the question as to what the Welsh coalfields can sell to America under existing conditions.

The margin for the coal-exporting districts is about 680,000 tons a week. No arbitrary limit can be placed to the quantity which it is possible for the collieries to produce in a seven-hour day, but the circumstances under which this trade has been carried on during the past 12 months go to show that it is not possible to improve to any appreciable extent on that quantity.

FREDERICTON, New Brunswick.—The hay crop of New Brunswick this year is estimated at 1,250,000 tons, according to the provincial department of agriculture. Heavy rain has assured a good crop everywhere, though flood damage has been suffered in limited parts of the St. John Valley. Cereals are good and clover bloom will advance with timothy in flower. Wheat, oats and barley are in good condition.

Milk in Its Safest Form

CARNATION Milk is just pure, rich, cows' milk with part of the water evaporated—sealed in air-tight containers—and sterilized.

It is doubly safe and completely safeguarded. In the can it stays sweet indefinitely. You can keep a month's supply ahead. Your children can have this nourishing milk to drink whenever they need it.

You simply dilute Carnation Milk with an equal part of water. It is ready for every ordinary milk use. Its rich quality adds richness to cocoa, bread-and-milk, puddings, soups, etc.

Or you can use it as cream direct from the can. Carnation is the only milk supply your home needs. Try this convenient milk supply one week and you will never go back to ordinary milk. Order several tall (16 oz.) cans or a case of 48 cans from your grocer.

Write for the new Carnation Cook Book. It is free and it contains over 100 valuable recipes. Try this recipe.

CARNATION BREAD PUDDING.

3 tablespoonfuls sugar, 2 2/3 cups water, 1 1/3 cups Carnation Milk, 2 cups stale bread crumbs, 2 eggs, 1/2 teaspoonful salt, 1 tablespoonful butter, 1/2 teaspoonful vanilla. Scald milk diluted with the water, pour over bread crumbs, add sugar and salt. Let cool, then add slightly beaten eggs and flavoring. Pour into a buttered pudding pan and bake in a slow oven. This recipe serves six people.

Sir Christopher Wren Bicentenary of His Death Will Be Commemorated in February Next

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Sir Christopher Wren's name is indissolubly linked with St. Paul's Cathedral, in the crypt of which his body was laid almost 200 years ago, and on Monday, February 26th next, a notable gathering in St. Paul's will commemorate the bicentenary of his death, which occurred on February 25, 1723. The Royal Institute of British Architects has the matter in hand, and a committee has been appointed to arrange the details for the memorial services. This committee consists of representatives of Government departments, and of the great archaeological, artistic and scientific societies of London, also representatives of the leading universities.

It is proposed to organize a procession from the Mansion House to St. Paul's, which will be followed by a service at the Cathedral and a visit to the tomb of Sir Christopher. The President of the Royal Institute for British Architects will lay a wreath on the tomb. On a tablet over a doorway leading thereto is the well-known epitaph in Latin to the effect that the Cathedral is Sir Christopher's monument, and under this tablet will pass many of the present notable men of Great Britain.

WREN'S RECORD.

The architectural schools in London have been invited to produce a pageant illustrating the period of Sir Christopher Wren, preparations for which are already under way. Visits to various buildings erected by Wren will take place, among these being the Royal Exchange and the famous Bow Church, with its bells proclaiming that all within sound thereof to be Cockneys. It is hoped by this means to draw attention to some beautiful examples of the work of the great architect, and to stimulate still further the increasing interest in architecture displayed by the general public.

Born at East Knoyle, Wiltshire, on October 20, 1632, the son of a clergyman, Sir Christopher Wren achieved renown as an astronomer, as well as an architect. He was Professor of Astronomy at Gresham College in 1657, and Professor of Astronomy at Oxford University in 1660. His undying fame, however, is connected with St. Paul's Cathedral, which he designed and built.

STATESMAN ALSO.

Sir Christopher's opportunity came with the destruction of a large part of London as a result of the great fire of September, 1666. Almost all the churches in London were swept away, by the flames, and old St. Paul's was left in ruins. Sir Christopher was commissioned to rebuild the Cathedral. The first stone of the new Cathedral was laid in 1675 and the last stone in 1710. Sir Christopher made designs also for fifty other churches which had been burned. The many-sided genius of this remarkable man, who was a scientist, as well as an architect and astronomer, included statesmanship. He was a member of the House of Commons from 1685 to 1700.

The Chinese Murder Case

CHARLY FONG IS EXAMINED.

The preliminary hearing in the case of Wo Fen Game, who is charged with murder, was continued in the Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon. One witness named Charly Fong, who is about to leave the country on a business trip, was examined. Witness will be returning early in October and he had to sign bonds to this effect that he would be present for the trial. The Crown is not prepared as yet to continue, and the further hearing was adjourned till the Court is ready to proceed. Judge McCarthy conducted the proceedings.

BREWERY WILL BE CHARGED WITH BREACH PROHIBITION

Police Seize Bottled Beer Saturday.

The Newfoundland Brewery, Ltd., are shortly to be the defendants in an action for a breach of the Prohibition Act, taken against them by Sgt. John Simmons of the city detective force.

On Saturday night Sgt. Simmons visited a number of small stores and took from each some of Amber Ale, the product of the Newfoundland Brewery for analysis, it having been alleged to the police that this brewery was turning out beer containing more than the two per cent of alcohol allowed by law. When the case against the Newfoundland Brewery will be brought to Court has not yet been definitely decided.

Previous to Prohibition the Newfoundland Brewery and Bennett's Brewery were two of the three manufacturers of light beers and stouts, and later they went into the manufacture of similar beers, but containing the specified strength.

BODY IS FOUND BY FISHERMEN IN CUCKHOLD'S COVE

William Ryan, Missing For Several Weeks, Brought To Shore To-day.

The body of William Ryan, 46, single, of Prescott St., was found floating in Cuckhold's Cove at one o'clock to-day, by William Barrett, a man named Lampard and another, all residing at the Battery.

The men were returning from the fishing grounds at the hour above mentioned, when they saw the body floating on the water and they secured it and brought it to the city, landing at King's Wharf.

Sgt. Keefe took charge of the body, which is very badly decomposed and had it conveyed to the morgue, where a post mortem examination will be held this afternoon.

William Ryan left his home, Prospect Street several weeks ago and beyond the fact that he was seen a day or two later in the East End, nothing had been heard of him.

Charged With Defrauding INSURANCE COMPANIES TAKE ACTION.

The preliminary enquiry into a charge against a Northern business man of attempting to defraud certain insurance companies, was begun before Judge McCarthy in the Magistrate's Court this morning. Mr. Higgins, K.C., is defending and Mr. P. J. Summers, K.C., Deputy Minister of Justice is prosecuting. One witness, Mr. Knight, representing the insurance companies was examined this morning, and further evidence will be taken at Catalina.

All Bodies Found

Sgt. Keefe who has returned from the wreck of the Raleigh informs us that all the bodies of the lost seamen have been recovered and buried. There is no change at the wreck and the position of the ship is about the same as when previously reported. There were three warships here when Sgt. Keefe left, five days ago.

You can keep spoons and forks bright after washing them if you allow them to stand for a few minutes in a jugful of soapy water to which a little ammonia has been added.

LOCAL ITEMS

Band Concert.—A concert will be given tonight by the Methodist Guards Band in Victoria Park, weather permitting.

Flag Half-mast.—The flag in the C. of E. Cathedral grounds was half masted yesterday out of respect to the memory of the late Rev. Jos. F. Phelps, a former headmaster at Bishop Feild College, whose death at the ripe old age of 94 years, occurred at Iffey, Oxford, on Thursday last.

Big Program is Ready for National Sports Day

THERE ARE 216 ENTRIES FOR THE VARIOUS EVENTS.

There are 216 entries for tomorrow's championship sports at St. George's Field.

The Telegram road race, which is being run under the auspices of the National Sports Committee, will be starting from Irvine station sharp at 4 p.m., and will finish on the field at 5 p.m. Altogether there are fourteen competitors, viz.: T. Furlong, J. Redmond, Wm. Dodd, Graham Kelly, Ron O'Toole, Geo. E. Joyce, G. Clarke, Robt. Maundrell, R. P. Redmond, F. Fleming, Jas. Fitzpatrick, H. Hill, J. Cooper and Jack Bell. Mr. William Herder, eldest son of the late W. J. Herder, who so generously donated the handsome cup and medals, will start the race, which promises to be most interesting. Many of the young long distance runners, who have been coming to the fore of late, are competing, and it is generally believed our local champion, Jack Bell, who is the favourite, will not have an easy victory and that some surprises are in store.

The various athletic clubs are well represented, the Guards leading the van with some 30 competitors, the St. Bon's closely following with 25, while the B.I.S., C.L.B., C.C.C. and High-landers are also well to the fore, and the fight for the Hayward trophy is bound to be exciting.

In view of the fact that each event will determine the championship for 1922, very special care is being taken, and the Committee are keeping in mind every little detail and all that is required is the Toronto man to do his duty and the success of the Championship meet is assured.

The following is the complete list of entries: James Kielly, John Howlett, Mm. Gosse, G. Stone, Jim Herder, W. Kennedy, D. Badcock, Cyril Eagan, Gerald Eagan, Harvey Skirving, Grant Burnell, H. Nottall, Edward Phelan, R. Halley, G. Halley, L. Nikosey, L. Spurrell, J. Canning, W. Skinner, D. Muir, W. Thorburn, R. Kent, S. Fraser, C. Eagan, A. SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE IS LIKELY

Major Cotton Flies From Botwood To Hawke's Bay In Two and Half Hours

It looks as if the Hawke's Bay strike is nearing a settlement. Mr. Ray Bennett, the representative of the Aerial Survey Co. here, received the following message from Major Cotton this morning: "Left Botwood 2.10, arrived 3.45 p.m. yesterday. Going over to see men this morning."

Major Cotton intimated when he was here last week that he would meet no deputation of strikers and that he would have nothing whatever to do with men who saw fit to strike first and seek to make terms afterwards but that as soon as the strikers returned to work he would meet them and hear their demands. He also intimated that under no circumstances would he accede to the demands they had made for $45 per month and found. It was known that some of the men employed at this pit prop work were making $60 under the present terms, clear of all expenses.

It would seem, therefore, that the men have returned to work but what the outcome of their conference today with Major Cotton will be it is impossible at this writing to say.

It is most desirable that a satisfactory settlement of this difficulty should be arrived at because now that the worst season in the woods is over, conditions will be more congenial and during the winter season the men will be able to make good money on the scale being paid.

It was, too, the intention of the company to increase their activities and to employ during the winter months at least 600 men.

Latest news states that Major Cotton has offered men $55 per month and that men have refused.

Will Not Publish

Tomorrow being a public holiday, the Advocate will not be published. This is the last whole holiday for the season.

Slaughter In Exams

We referred on Saturday to the general "slaughter" which had taken place in the Associate Exams of the C. H. E.
